

Savannah Hurst

Journalism, Communication

Savannahhurst@ou.edu Savannahhurst.com

Experience

Student at University of Oklahoma – Contributing Reporter for The Huffington Post –
News Anchor at OU Nightly –Reporter for The Hownikan Citizen Potawatomi Nation
-- Marketing and Communications Director for Faithco Church

Education

University of Oklahoma

Broadcast Journalism, 2013 - 2017

Activities and Societies: NPPA, OU Nightly, Campus Activities Council, Student Council, Younglife student ministry.

Grade: Senior

Skills & Expertise

Broadcast Reporting

Public Speaking

People Skills

Videography

Research

Photography

Writing

iNews

Live Broadcasting

Adobe

Final Cut Pro

Volunteer Experience

Volunteer at National Press Photographers Association

2015 - 2016 (2 years)

News Anchor for OU Nightly at University of Oklahoma

August 2013 - 2014 (2 years)

I was a news anchor and writer for a student-led broadcast news show on campus that was aired live on local stations in Oklahoma. Throughout my two years I did everything from reporting, writing, on-camera news briefs, anchoring, and everything behind the scenes as well.

Contributing Reporter for The Huffington Post

January 17th 2016 – February 2nd 2016 (2 ½ Weeks)

I was given the opportunity to go and report on the presidential campaigns and caucuses in Iowa for a little over two weeks. I was nominated by two of my professors and chosen out of the entire journalism college along with fourteen others. During this time, I followed two candidates and wrote online, broadcast, and video stories from a millennial point of view. My stories were posted onto the Huffington Post's website.

Reporter /Writer for The Hownikan, Citizen Potawatomi Nation

January 2017 - Present

I am currently an intern for the Citizen Potawatomi Nation's Public Information department. I report and write for the Howinkawn, the tribal newspaper, as well as produce promotional videos, news packages and online stories.